Examiner - attached is a copy the Second Amendment that we submitted to the USPTO on Friday, July 11, 2003 with an RCE.

As set forth in the Second Amendment:

- it is alleged in the Official Action that Ise discloses two units as claimed (Official Action, pg. 2). Specifically, it is alleged that the first unit is the CPU (10) of Ise and the second unit is the display unit (2) of Ise. However, the units of claim 1 are computing units. The display unit (2) of Ise is merely a dumb terminal - it is not a computing unit. A fair and proper reading of Ise simply discloses that the display unit (2) is an LCD display - and not a monitor computing unit as recited in claim 1.
- It is alleged in the Official Action that Morimoto discloses two units as claimed (Official Action, pg. 2). Specifically, it is alleged that the first unit is the display control connection 29 of Morimoto and the second unit is the current page guide 18c of Morimoto. The units of claim 1 are computing units. The current page guide 18c of Morimoto is merely a section of display screen - it is NOT A COMPUTING UNIT. A fair and proper reading of Morimoto simply discloses that the current page guide 18c is an area of the input section 18 display - and not a monitor computing unit as recited in claim 1 that is incapable of that operates as recited in claim 1. .

I will call you tomorrow at 10:30 AM to discuss this application.
